Japan, in Pact With U.S., Vows Trade Gap Cut

By William Chapman

TOKYO, Jan. 13 (WP).-Japan promised today to sharply cut balance of trade surplus and said it will strive to eventually e out the surplus completely.

Winding up a heotic two days of negotiations with U.S. officials, an also agreed formally to accept a deficit in its current accounts

It also promised to reduce tariffs and make other changes in ling patterns in ways that would give foreign countries the same

Japan as Japanese companies have in overseas markets. The pledges were contained in a joint statement by U.S. and Japanese trade negotiators who contended that it heralded a new era of peaceful trade relations between the two countries. Robert Strauss, the special U.S. trade representative, said at a press conference that the agree-ment marked a major "change in direction" on the trade front.

"We haven't solved all of the problems but we have defined them and we will begin a new process which will strengthen our relationship," Mr. Strauss

He acknowledged trat the agreement had not eliminated the protectionist movements in the U.S. Congress that seek to cut back sharply on Japanese imports that compete with U.S. products. But he said that "those protectionist forces would have raged much stronger if we had not come here." He called the agreement "a more far-reaching result tra I had auticipated."

. Early-Morning Agreement The agreement was reached in an unusual hargaining session at nearly 2 a.m. today after both sides had indicated there neight be no agreement. Japanese negoflators had complained that the United States was demanding too many specific promises and was remotent to commit itself on paper to a policy of eliminating trading surpluses and accepting sibility of deficits in com-

It was at a dinner party given by U.S. Ambessador Mike Mans-field that the two sides agreed on the final language. As late as 1:30 a.m., it was understood, Mr. Strauss told the Japanese there would be no agreement unless his language was accepted. Sources on both sides said later that at that point Japan made

Japanese Reluctant

The key phrase was one that pledged Japan to a policy of achieving "equilibrium," or an end to the current accounts surplus. Japan had refused during week of working-level talks here to include that word in any agreement, claiming that as a nation dependent on foreign trade it could not publicly pro-claim a date by which it would wipe out its surplus.

There were different interpretations, however, as to how tightly it bound Japan to a specific time for reaching that goal, The United States wanted it pinned to the Japanese fiscal year, which begins in April, 1979, but the final version said in 1979 "and thereafter." Japanese sources claimed that the addition of inority leader, that he could import the treatles if they were the word thereafter meant there was no obligation to attain that

Outlook for the Reform in U.S. Taxation of Its Overseas Citizens

By Robert Sines

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (IRT).—The question of how to tax U.S. citizens working abroad will probably be settled this year, and although the details remain unclear the broad outlines of the reform are beginning to take shape.

As the second session of the 95th Congress nears, most indicators point to a phaseout of the current exclusion of some income and its replacement with a series of special deductions. There also are signs that Congress will delay further the implementation of the 1976 Tax Reform Act's Section 911-00 foreign-source income—until the revised law takes effect. Such a delay was voted by the House last year but never reached the Senate floor. Recently, Rep. Al Uliman, D-Ore.,

Senator Says U.S. Spy Network Was 'Blown'

By Bill Richards

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (WP). -The United States lost an entire spy network, apparently in Central America, during the last 18 months after a young military sergeant attached to the National Security Agency sold top-secret intelligence data to foreign agents, Sen. Joseph Biden has reported.

Sen. Biden, D-Del., who is a member of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence and head of its Subcommittee on Secrecy and Disclosure, told a student audience at Stanford University Wednesday that "damage-assessment reports" from intelligence agencies showed that the sergeant was promoted and given an honorable discharge after selling "entire reels of this information ... to the secret police [of a foreign government], blowing all our cover in a whole area of the world."

Th esenator said that the incident was one of between 40 and 60 "serious breaches of national security ranging from outright murder to major espionage" in-volving U.S. security agencies, according to a study of the agencies' reports. None of the inci-dents were prosecuted in the courts, he said, because the sgencles feared such prosecution would reveal additional sensitive intelligence information.

Michigan Deer Demonstrates How to Come in From the Cold

TAWAS CITY, Mich., Jan. 13 (UPD).—Newell Jensen, 21, said that he was driving to work early yesterday when a buck meandered out of the Huron National Forest and bumped into the door of his vehicle

Mr. Jensen stopped to see if the buck was hurt. The deer stood up, climbed through the open car door and curled up sudd up, chimbed through the open car door and curred up under the dashboard. In a hurry to get to work, Mr. Jensen telephoned the sheriff's department. Two deputies responded and, while they talked with Mr. Jensen, the buck jumped out of the car, wandered around a bit and then got back in.

The deputies coaxed the deer out of Mr. Jensen's small car and into their patrol car. The buck settled down comfortably in the back seat. "He seemd to want to be wherever it was warm," Deputy Sheriff Charles Bublitz, 23, said. "We turned the heater on full blast." The deputies took the buck to the police station and later drove him 12 miles out of town to the forest. "He got out, looked around and ran off." said Mr. Bublitz. "It was all pretty weird."

Nicotine Spray Used-in Tests To Find a 'Cure' for Smoking

U.S. Air Force Asks to Code Missile Tests

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (WP). The U.S. Air Force has renewed long-smoldering controversy within the Pentagon over whether the United States should prevent the Soviet Union from reading telemetry from U.S. military missile tests.

Air Force officials want to encode the telemetric radio signals from the tests in order to keep the Soviet Union from being able to learn the technical secrets on pressure, speed, temperature and other data transmitted from missiles being tested. But Defense Secretary Harold Brown is resisting the demands, as have his pre-

Pentagon sources indicate that the Soviet Union, at least on some SS-20 and other test missile flights has encoded its telemetry to prevent the United States from monitoring the flights.

A central issue in the dispute whether it is contrary to the letter, or at least the spirit, of the first strategic arms limitation agreement to screen missile signals. The agreement stipulated that "each party undertakes not to interfere with the national technical means of verification of the other parties."

Brown Backs Monitoring Mr. Brown is understood to have taken the position that he wants to persuade the Soviet interest of the two superpowers to monitor each other's tests.

The telemetry in the tests at issue provides information on the status of each country's missile program-data such as range, accuracy and likely payload of the latest strategic rockets. Some U.S. sources suggest that the Soviet Union may not regard the encoding of missile telemetry as a violation of the SALT-1 agreement. But the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency regards such signals as part of the "national technical means of verification" that the treaty requires be kept open to all sides, according to spokesman Thomas Halstead.

There have been no official U.S. contentions, however, that the Soviet Union has violated

Researcher Asks Wider Study on Breast Cancer

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 13 (WP) -Many environmental sub-stances should be studied as possible causes of breast cancer, according to a University of California researcher who has found that the breast fluid contains many chemicals to which women have been exposed.

The Los Angeles Times reported that Dr. Nicholas Petrakis recently found that the breasts of nonlactating women smokers contained picotine. Previous studies have shown that the breasts of lactating women harbor nicotine as well as a number of other foreign substances.

But Dr. Petrakis believes that as far as breast cancer is concerned it may be more significant that nonlactating women collect environmental substances because lactating women get rid of the chemicals in their milk when they nurse.

Pluids secreted by nonlactating women, on the other hand, concentrate in their breast ducts, exposing the tissue to any harmful chemicals that may be in the fluid. Breast cancer originates in

The scientist pointed out, however, that there is no evidence that women smokers have a higher rate of breast cancer than

The Year's First Lessons

The most tiresome cliche of the political season is the hearty comment that President Carter learns quickly. It's like saying that a pitcher going into the third game of the World Series is showing a knack for picking up the rules of the game. But it leads to a more interesting question: What should he have learned from the rough passages of the past year-and what should Congress and the country have learned? Since it's always beloful to stick to specific cases, iet's consider the education aspects of the major failure of Mr. Carter's first year in office, the unbroken impasse over the energy bill.

In retrospect it clearly seems a mistake to have introduced one gigantic energy bill as the comprehensive solution. Mr. Carter likes comprehensive solutions; his mind inclines toward them. It seemed a good idea at the time, and this newspaper joined in the applause at his courage in taking up all of the energy is to get in That strategy might have worked several years ago, in the initial anxiety over the oil embargo. But the atmosphere has thenged, Mr. Carter owes his election to the strong current of public skepticism regarding vast presidential initiatives and, in general, federal claims of competence. Ironically the President is, you might say, the victim of the attitudes that brought him to power.

Because the energy plan started through Congress as one hill, nothing can he settled until everything is settled, Sen. Russell Long. D-La., is holding up the crucial energy taxes until there's an agreement on gas pricing. The House conferees are holding up everything else, including the noncontroversial conservation and utility-rate provisions, until the taxes are worked out. Presumably a hill will eventually be passed, with the usual complicated compromises. At his press conference Thursday. Mr. Carter called it his first priority this year. But it will take effect iater than the administration had hoped, and in a greatly diluted form, Will Mr. Carter have another opportunity to get major energy legislation before the 1930 election? Probably not, unless there is some major convulsion threatening the flow of oil from abroad. Having got the hill that he called comprehensive, the President will have great difficulty getting Congress to go hack into those trenches. Energy, incidentally, is hardly the only subject in which the passion for comprehensive bills is turning into a political liability. The comprehensive tax-reform hili was to have been introduced in October, but it hasn't appeared and probably never will. The comprehensive welfare-reform hill is now mired down in endless hearings, and its prospects are dim.

The second lesson of the energy debacle and the more important one-goes to the nature of political leadership. The central reason for the impasse on the bill is that most Americans still don't understand why it is necessary or even useful to do all of those hard and expensive things. Mr. Carter launched the bill last spring with two rain-hall-and-thunder speeches declaringcorrectly, in our view—that it was the most urgent business confronting this country. Then he turned to other things and for five months hardly touched the subject. Mr. Carter thinks that virtue and reason speak for themselves. That is a risky assumption for anyone to make, but particularly for a pres-

In the fall, he returned to energy with a couple of brief but vehement attacks on the oll companies. Then came a television address that was restrained and conciliatory to the point of being soporific. The effect was apparently to fortify the widespread impression that the crisis must have been the oll companies' fault and that, anyway, it seems to have gotten less compelling. That impression is profoundly wrong, but Mr. Carter has never found a way to explain to voters precisely why it is wrong. When voters do not see the reason for a new tax-there were four of them in the original energy bill -Congress finds it inadvisable to act quickly.

Mr. Carter's loss of initiative is not, in this case. Congress's gain. The long war of attrition through the Senate and now through the House-Senate conference has not visibly helped any of the reputations at the Capitol. Viewed from a distance, the picture is dominated by lobbyists, ideological zealots and every kind of parochial interest. That gives Congress its own interest in getting a bill passed, but not necessarily a bill that looks much like Mr. Carter's.

Next Friday, Mr. Carter will begin his second year in office. The record so far is a respectable one, notable for good intentions and a steady spirit. But the year is not ending with the kind of achievement for which he had hoped. The reasons for that shortfall do not seem to us to lie beyond comprehension-or beyond remedy.

and, finally, themselves, At first, eyeing a Red Sea base, they gorged Somalia on more than a billion dollars' worth of arms and thus emboldened the Somalis to sponsor the "liberation" of the Somali-peopled Ogaden region of Ethlopia. Many Africans were alarmed to see Moscow seeking a base and promoting an invasion. Armed attack, most Africans agree, is no way to redress the ethnic grievances arising from the arbitrariness of colonial borders.

Now the Russians are looking again for a Red Sea hase and political influence-in Ethlopia. Again they have supplied more than a billion dollars in arms, plus hundreds of Soviet advisers and even more Cubans. Not only are Africans alarmed at this expansion of the foreign Communist presence; they and others also suspect that when, as expected. Communist-hacked Ethiopian forces clear the Somalis from the Ogaden. the Ethiopians will keep going into Somalia.

Jimmy Carter voiced keen alarm about these developments Thursday. He all but conceded that his effort to encourage greatpower restraint in Africa, in order to let Africans solve African problems, had not induced parallel Soviet restraint. The Somalis, he suggested, should rapidly open negotiations. Yet it seems that the Somalis would

The Russians are behaving cynically in wish negotiations only if Ethiopia would conthe Horn of Africa and, by so doing, under- sider self-determination for Somali tribesmen cutting the interests of Africa, the United in the Ogaden. This the Ethiopians are unlikely to do least of all when they are pre a massive counteroffensive. Most members of the Organization of African Unity may deplore the Communist presence, but since that presence serves a government that so far is only trying to regain control over its own territory, the OAU is mute.

> Through 1977 the Carter administration in effect gave Cuba the choice of tapering off its African activities or losing the opportunity to improve direct ties. Cubs chose Africa, and the improvement of Cuban-American relations is now in the freeze. But the Russians have far more at stake in their relationship with Washington, Ethiopia is heating up fast as a political issue in the United States. Increasingly, Mr. Carter will face demands to do something about this latest Soviet-Cuban power play. The Ethiopian question is bound to complicate his relations with Congress across the whole spectrum of detente issues, including those in which the Russians bave a high interest. We don't like the idea of holding SALT hostage to Ethiopla, but the Russians should know that, as a practical matter, this is the way things are likely to move unless they apply restraint. Washington may he stack on the Horn. Mos-

Lynx Are Watching

... By Egyptian wish, the question of the Israell settlements in the Sinal is to be dealt with in the defense ministers' group rather than, as Israel would have preferred, by the foreign ministers. It is clear from these arrangements that President Sadat wishes to test out the ground over the Sinai settlements question before proceeding to weightier matters such as the West Bank and the Palestinians.

In this Mr. Sadat's instinct is surely right. The Sinal is the most direct bilateral issue between the two countries and in many ways the most straightforward. If it cannot be settled, nothing will be. It is a pity that the question of the Israeli settlements . . . has in recent days become the subject of loud rhetoric on both sides. Mr. Begin has said the settlements must stay under Israeli protection. Mr. Sadat that they should be demolished. Mr. Begin has his troubled coalition to consider, Mr. Sadat the Arah world in general, watching lynx-like for signs of "capitulation." Despite these noises off, there is no reason to think agreement will not be reached eventually, if the will to do so is there, which it probably is. It all boils down to providing enough security for Israel during the first tricky year or so. hefore real confidence can take root. That should not be impossible.

WASHINGTON.—The newly appointed chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, G. William Miller jr., has been in Washington this week wondering how he got here and where he's going in '78. A lot of other people are wondering the same, but he seems amiably relaxed.

He asked Vice-President Mon-dale how he happened to be chosen for this critical job, but Fritz didn't tell him. He asked Arthur Burns to stay on the board of the Fed, but he didn't get an answer to that either. Sen. Proximire of Wisconsin nominated Miller as the financial "rookie" of the year, and Miller said the senator had a point, but he'd see him later.

First personal impressions of new appointees are important in this town, and Miller has made a good first impression. He wondered when he was appointed whether he should talk to the reporters before he was confirmed by the Senate, but decided to hell with it, and has been available and prudently responsive to everybody's questions ever since.

Usual Treatment

So Miller is now getting the usual treatment: A lot of publicity; a lot of questions ho can't possibly answer about how to stamp out inflation and unem-ployment, increase the money supply and keep interest rates down, solve the energy crisis, and get on with the White House, the Treasury, the Council of Economic

Advisers, and the Congress. Meanwhile, he's trying to figure out a few incidental personal matters such as how to get confirmed without having to sell all his Textron stock whether to sell his house in Providence, and where, if he's confirmed he will sleep at night in Washington. I found him at the Hay Adams

Motel across from the White House, and, in response to questions, he made the following

· He didn't see any big difference between his approach to "this job" and Burns's approach. On most of the major decisions Burns had made, he said he'd probably have come out about the same. He didn't say where he might have disagreed.

Decline of Dollar

· He was concerned about the decline of the dollar in relation to the Japanese yen, the West German mark, and other major world currencies and was glad that the Fed and the Treasury had agreed to support the dollar. A deflated dollar, he insisted, might help sell U.S. products abroad, but overall, it was bad business and bad psychology. It was difficult enough to pay $45 billion a year for foreign oil, but what if the oil-producing countries raised their prices to stay equal to the decline of the value of the dollar?

• Miller also understood the need for emergency measures to probabit the importation of steel below fair market prices in this country, but these were, he said, "Band-Aids," to deal with industrial and human problems in unemployment areas like Youngstown, Ohio, The problem was to give the U.S. companies an equal chance by tax incentives to modernize their plants so that they could compete on a fair basis with the other major industrial

· He didn't think we should play the "numbers game" with the unemployment figures. He was very optimistic about this in the long run. Even with the

Miller has been in and out of kept expanding.
This, at least, is how I heard Washington on special assignments for President Kennedy and Miller. He clearly is not a typical Johnson just enough not to be world banker, or profes intimidated by the place, and he is clearly not intimidated now. His attitude is that he didn't ask economist or academic theorist. or even big-business pragmatist out of the Textron or any other to be invited here, but is pleased and will do the best he can if multinational corporation: they want him. If they don't, First Impressions home holds no terrors for him.

With this confident but modest approach, Miller has made a good nd. He is a feisty little guy with a boyish grin and a broken nose, and that spontaneous optimistic American attitude that trouble is inevitable but everything is possible. He will have his troubles at the Ped like Arthur Burns and Bill Martin before him, but the guess here is that somehow he will get along with the Treasury, the Congress and the business community. Maybe this is expecting too much on the basis of first impressions, but at least he has made a good

Japanese Controversy on 'Right' to Sunshine

By Ken Ishii

TOKYO. — Japanese cities are implementing ordinances that legally define how much sunshine people are entitled to. Officials that, as far as they know, It is the first time anything of this kind has been attempted

In Tokyo, the basic guidelines were framed by the city government last year, followed by public meetings at the ward level to acquaint citizens with the guidelines and hear their views.

With some probable modifications resulting from the public discussions, the ordinances will spell out now many hours of sunshine per day Tokyoites are en-titled to in their areas of residence. Target date for imple-mentation of the Tokyo ordinances is June. In at least a dozen other cities, including Osaka, sunshine ordinances have already been

Do people have a "right" to sunshine? Yes, insist Japanese urbanites, increasing numbers of whom are finding their once summy homes cast in the shadow of new high-rise buildings. To a great extent, the origin of the problem is the inadequacy of Japan's zoning laws. In Tokyo, for example, there was an excellent opportunity to create broad bouleyards and a sound soning system after World War II when the capital lay in ruins. But the city was allowed to rebuild along its former lines, with commercial and residential properties overlapping in a disorganized patchwork. Since then, the controversy has been compounded on the one hand by the skyrocketing cost of land, which makes builders build as high as possible, and on the other by the growing voice of environmentalists, who maintain sunshine is an essential part of e minimum standard of living, The construction boom during

Japan's high-economic-growth period triggered such a flood of protests by residents whose sunthine was theatened that the Dict, in November, 1976, approved changes in building laws aimed at assuring Japanese a basic minimum of sun. Having enacted this assurance into law (although lawmakers were careful to point out they were not granting it as a constitutional right), it was left to local authorities to draw up ordinances to meet local situa

Complex Formulas

The draft guideline for Tokyo's Minato Ward, for example, speci-fles that in certain residential s, a new building—those already constructed are exempted -may not cast a shadow for more than three hours a day up to a point 10 meters from the boundary of the property on which it will stand, and for no more than two hours beyond the 10-meter line. In other, less-residential areas, the formula is 4 hours and 2 1/2 hours. In still other areas, 5 and 3 hours. The formulas are com-

Nobody really expects that the new ordinances will resolve the sunshine controversy. But local officials hope that the rules will at least ease their tremendous work load as mediators in disputes between builders and affected residents:

As things stand now, a builder who plans to put up a structure four or more stories high is "encouraged" by local authorities to obtain the signatures—in effect, approval of residents in the immediate area before a building permit is issued. This "encouragement" is similar to the extralegal "administrative guidance" which the government regulates corporate activities.

The builder then prepares a "sunshine map" indicating the area over which the proposed building will east a shadow during the winter equinox—the shortest day of the year-and negotiates with neighborhood residents on how much they should be paid for their loss of sun. If all goes smoothly, they are paid in exchange for signatures.

Waiting List

But more often than not, nerotiations reach an impasse. the sunshine pay-Sometimes ments are turned down as too small. Sometimes residents seek to have the proposed building's height reduced rather than accept money. Emotions frequently run high, And local government offices are called on to act as gobetween. All of Tokyo's 23 ward offices maintain fully staffed sections that specialize in such disputes, and the waiting list is usually long.

How much then is, say, an hour of sunshine worth? The amount varies, depending on the pressu the builder is under to get con struction started and the negotiating skill of the residents @ their lawyer. Figures range from about 300,000 to 500,000 year (about $1,250 to $2,080) or more At 500,000 yen, a resident losing four hours of sun can expect to collect 2 million yen (of which 600,000 yen is tax deductible). Loss of sun itself is not the only factor. Payments made by the Ministry of Construction to residents losing sunlight from the construction of elevated highways have also taken into account con pensation for extra heating and electricity, and even clothes-drying expenses because the residents were not able to dry their laundry in the sun.

While fixing the number of hours of shadow a building may cast, the new ordinances will not spell out how much sunshine is worth. Most Japanese city dwellers consider it priceless.

Chinese Leaders Attacked in Army Paper

By Jay Mathews

HONG KONG, Jan. 13 (WP). -China's leading army newspaper has launched an unprecedented attack on "slippery" and "windblown" leaders, indicating that powerful military officers are deeply dissatisfied with the results of a 15-month-old politicai purge.

In two articles, longer and more vebement than anything published on the subject since the death of Mao Tse-tung, the Liberation Army Daily has criticized leaders who have managed to surviva politically in the last several years by adhering to wide changes in government policy. The articles are the strongest evidence in months that Chairman Hua Kuo-feng is struggling to hold together a fac-tion-ridden party leadership.

"The main features, of those who follow the wind, are steering the boat according to which way the wind blows and the advocacy of opportunism," said a Jan. Liberation Army Daily article that has just reached here. Their color changes when they hear the wind, and they sell their soul at a discount. Spec-ulation has become their habit, and they treat any woman who gives them milk as their mother." No One Identified

The articles do not identify any current leaders, but they appear to be aimed as high as the ruling Communist party Politburo, and particularly at leaders such as Peking Mayor Wu Teh and Peking Army commander Chen Hsi-lien. Both men seemed to ally themselves with a dogmatic Maoist faction in Peking in 1976, then quickly declared allegiance to a more pragmatic faction that took power after Mao's death late ongoing purge of former sup-porters of dogmatic Maoists, such as Chiang Ching, Mao's widow. Mr. Hua, who has managed to survive the political twists of tha last few years, is thought to have protected Mr. Wu, Mr. Chen and others from the anger of party Vice-Chairman Teng Hsiao-ping and other veteran officials who were pushed into political limbo by Chiang Ching while Mr. Wu and Mr. Chen survived.

The articles argue for an almost unthinkable end to the traditional Chinese habit of shifting with the political winds. "We must be honest men who speak honest words and do honest deeds," the Jan. 4 article said. Both articles speak in parables and analogies, with no names

Cambodia Regime Seen Imperiled

By Henry Kamm

BANGKOK, Jan. 13 (NYT) .-A belief is taking hold among That and Western analysis here that Vietnam has achieved the original military goal of its massive incursion into Cambodia and reduced Cambodia's forces in the eastern region of that country to virtual impotence.

The goal, according to the analysts, was to counter a mounting succession of Cambodian raids into Vietnam. at many points along their 750-mile border by sunching one large scale strike into Cambodia. This tactic was adopted largely to prove Hanol's readiness to meet force with force, the analysts said, noting that it was not necessary to prove Vietnam's preponderant military superiority in manpower, equipment and ability to conduct large-scale operations.

The underlying objective of the invasion, in the belief of diplomatic observers, was to convince the Phnom Panh regime of Vietnam'e will to use its military expecity and thus persuada Cambodia to negotiate with Vietnam a modus vivendi that would assure Hanol of a peaceful border and, perhaps, a mea-sure of influence in the Cambodian capital.

However, Cambodia did not accept the heavy Vietnamese hint, refused to transfer the conflict to the diplomatic sphere and instead, on New Year's Eve, broke diplomatic relations with Vietnam. At the same time, Cambodia began a national and international campaign of virulent condemnation of its former ally and called on its population to drive the invaders back.

Kill Order Heard This campaign, according to the analysis, led to a Vietnamese decision to step up its offensive goal to one of destroying the Cambodian Army units facing it. Western electronic interception of Vietnamese battlefield communications recorded an order to a unit in the field to stop pur-suing territorial gain and concentrate on the main objective -which, according to the order, was to "kill" the Cambodian

Army troops. Cambodia's hard line still does Prime Minister Raymond Barre not appear to have changed and, China Jan. 19 to 24, his office according to Thai sources, the Vietnamese may now be digging in on a line that will, in effect

Retention of Control

It also raises the possibl'ity that Vietnam may now be prepared to retain control over the territory that it has wrested from Cambodia, at least until a regime more favorable to Hanol can be installed in Phnom Penh. The analysts betray no doubt

VIENNA, Jan. 13 (NYT) .-Messages from all over the world have been sent to Alexander Dubcek on the 10th anniversary of his appointment as first secretary of the Czechoslovak Communist party, a watershed in his country'e postwar history, but few of them, if any, have so far been delivered to him, according to information from Bratislava. Private reports from Bratielava, the capital of Slovakia, indicate that police surveillance of Mr. Dubcek, who ied Czechoslovaking through a short-lived period of liberalization, the socalled "Prague spring," has been

Mr. Dubcek's measures to liber alize Communism were viewed in Moscow as threatening the system, and the experiment was halted by the Soviet-led mill-tary invasion in August, 1968. Eight months later, Mr. Dubcek was replaced by Gustav Husak, the present leader.

Lest year Mr. Dubcek was not among the signers of Charter 77, a human-rights declaration. However, he authorized a statement that he shared its views Members of the Charter 77 group who are in contact with him say that he continues to consider himself a Communist and is convinced he will one day

"The moment we all acquire a national isnguage," the Nairoti Times commented last month, "all pear and we will talk, think, act, dress and see like one giant-one big Kenyan."

That, however, will be no small task. There are more than 2,000 ethnic groups, or tribes, in Africa, each of which in preco-ionial times functioned as a mini-state. Each had its own language, culture and identity. Even today many, if not most, seek to preserve that heritage. In many countries tribal ioyalties are far more intense than national loyal-

BRUSSELS (IRT)—For textile designer Marjatta Metsovaara, stepping into the plane to Helsinki at the Brussels airport is much like taking a local train to work for other commuters After nearly two decades of plane-hopping to work and back, she is well ahead of the growing trend in Europe for business executives, Eurocrats, teachers, artists and many others who commute across frontiers rather than from suburb to city.

With two textile factories, a showroom and a shop in Helsinki, and a home, husband and children in Antwerp, Marjatta Metsovaara, or Mrs. van Havere, depending on which country she happens to be in, does not feel

THEATER IN LONDON

The Decline of an Irresistible Force

By John Walker

LONDON, Jan. 18 (IHT). Serah Bernhardt in her last, sad summer days, crippled and a little querulous, still driven by whatever-demons possessed her. and trying to remember her sensational past is the subject of John Murrell's small and gentle "Memoir," at the Ambassadors Theatre

Stobban McKenna, who man-ages to look surprisingly like the portraits of the aging Sarah, is effectively restrained in the role, giving only brief glimpses of the mpers and tantrums and the ned, hectic quality that made her the great star she was. The fires are damped down.

But Miss McKenns, a great actress herself, need not raise her voice to suggest greatness in others. The play for two char-acters—Bernhardt and her dithering amanuensis Georges Piton-is less a biographical excursion, though it V nat, than an elegy for a vanished age and an extinct species. "We are the last of our kind," Sarah recalls telling the dying Oscar Wilde.

Murrell also explores the relationship of his two characters, the one uninhibited, the other prim, shy and sexually dormant. Pitou, in a delightfully prim per-formance from Niall Buggy, is forced to act out the characters in Sarah's past, notably her mother and her errent husband, in an attempt to jog the actress's failing memory so that they may note down her past for another volume of memoirs. (or, rather, a crumpled blue cloth resenting a clear sky), the two play out a delicate comedy, charming memory of the de cline of an irresistible force.

At the Duke of York's George Baxt's "Spine Chiller" is that rare theatrical experience, an extremely bad play that is rather enjoyable. Most bad plays are painful experiences; it is impossible not to feel sympathy and actors, dutifully going through the motions onstage, and that, coupled with boredom, is the most depressing experience that art, or entertainment, can offer. But "Spine Chiller," unlike most plays, is bad on a grandiose scale. It is staggeringly banal and so silly as to be capable of numbing the mind days after-ward. It gives its cast the opportunity to overact in a most melodramatic fashion, so they appear to enjoy what they do. They are also allowed to act the part of bad actors, which seems to come easily to some of them.

Mainly, though, the play in-habits a parallel universe to our own; it has nothing to do with human reality or pain so that it is possible to sit back and enjoy its multiple murders and preposterous people. It is the sort of world made familiar in the Hollywood hokum of the 1930s and 1940s, where even nature behaves like a hack writer and produces thunderstorms at moments of melodramatic crisis. Public interest was aroused, but commercially the result was less impressive. The French were not sold still are not willing to pay high prices for this period. Blondel says.

The Musée des Arts Décoratifs, for 1; with no funds to spare, was not in the running, despite the exertions of keeper Yvonne Brun-

Eventually, the pieces were seen by the historian's friend Dominique de Mesnil and bought by the Mesnil Foundation in Houston and exhibited at the Art Institute at Rice University. The major 1976 art nouveau Belgium-France exhibition in Houston was built around this buy, accompanied by a masterly catalogue by Yvonne Brunhammer. The pieces are now back at the

Two more Guimard discoveries followed. One was a nonprofitmaking venture, the discovery of architectural drawings in a forgotten tool shed in the Parc da Saint-Cloud outside Paris. Bloodel's lead was a letter which he found in the New York Public Library. In it Guimard, who was giving up his large house, requested permission from the Ministry of Public Works to send his drawings for storage to the park tool shed. The drawings were stored and forgotten for half a century. They are now at the Musée des Arts Décoratifs.

Then, just a few weeks ago, Blondel saw several cast iron chairs in an antique shop. They were made by Guimard, for his Paris concert hall, which was later demolished in 1905.

Furniture From architecture Blondel and Plantin turned to furniture. Their best find was probably that of the art nouveau pieces done by Alsatian-born sculptor François Rnpert Carabin (1862-1932). Carabin was one of the most gifted aculptors of his generation; his nude women are as good as anything of Jules Delou or Auguste Maillol. With his surrealist vision he would perch them in perilous balance on top of display cabinets or show them straddling a slanting table leg.
All told, he produced about 20 such pieces, according to Yvonne Brunhammer's estimate in her introduction to the monograph published by the gallery.

At the exhibition they were mixed with terracottas, wax models and wood figurines which they had bought over the years at, among other sales, a Hôtel Dronot auction of December 1969, conducted by René and Claude Boisgirard.

Characteristically, the gallery quickly sold the small pieces but still owns the most important priced at 600,000 francs.

This is an interesting little show devoted to E.J. Marcy (1830-1904), a French man of science who is an excellent representative of the practical scientific enthusiasm of the 19th century which H.G. Wells depicts so well in "Tono Bungay." Marey, a physiologist, used photography to study the movement the flight of birds. For this purpose he developed a number of photographic techniques, some of them akin to the work of Muybridge, whose life span coincides with that of Marey but who worked mostly in California. Marey's work is the evolutionary stem out which the cinematograph was to bloom. The Lumière brothers ohief contribution was the sprocket-wheel, and Marey's disciples were indignant that he should not have received more credit. As a footnote to art history, one can observe the influence of some of Marey's work on artists interested in movement His sequences of a man dressed entirely in black, with white lines running down the arms and legs, walking past a black ground, was the immediate source both of Duchemp's "Nade Descending a Staircase" and Balla's "Little Girl on a Balcony." The show includes not only photos but the actual instruments that Marey developed

ART IN WASHINGTON

National Gallery Draws a Gift

By Paul Richard

WASHINGTON (WP) -Six figurative bronzes by Alberto Giacometti, examples of the late Swiss artist's "existential" style, have been given by Enid Annenberg Haupt to the National Gallery of Art.

The Gincometti sculptures will be displayed in the Gallery's East Building, which is scheduled to open on June 1. The building was designed, in part, as a magnet for such gifts, and the Hanpt donation, which includes a bronze by Henry Moore and a 1854 canvas by Mark Rothko, indicates that the new building already has begun to draw.

Mrs. Haupt was, until 1971, editor and publisher of Seventeen magazine. She is the sister of Walter Anneaberg, former am-bassador to Britain, who last March withdrew his offer to establish a $40-million center of art and communications at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Less than two months later, Annenberg and his wife pledged a cash donation of $2 million to the Philadelphia Museum of

Although she maintains an apartment in Manhattan, Mrs. Esupt said that she did not consider giving her Giacomettis to sither the Metropolitan or the Museum of Modern Art. "I'll tell you why," she said. "Both of those museums have offered to sell me paintings given them by others. The National Gallery. I'm pleased to see, does not sell works of art."

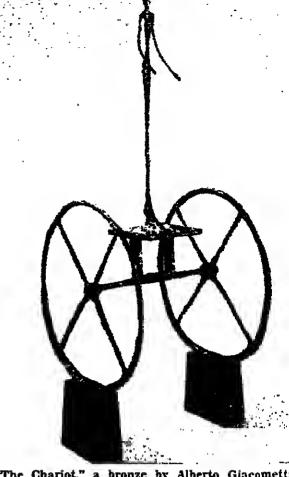

The Collection The Haupt Giacomettis include "The Charlot" and "The Forest," both of 1959, "Standing Woman" (1947), "City Square" (1948-'49), "Bust of a Woman" (1956) and "Walking Man" (1960), a 6-foot-2-inch bronze. All these works display the atternated, roughly modeled, oddly lonely figures for which the artist is best known. Alberto Giacometti (1901-1966) was associated with the sur-realists before World War II, The gallery already owns 'The Invisible Object (Hands Holding the Void" of 1934-35, a sculpture from his surrealist period which was bought with funds provided

Mr. Morieghem, who is director for external financial affairs at the Belgian Foreign Ministry, said that the meeting had considered a two-page draft for a new consensus designed to close a number of loopholes in the existing one.

"We feel that changes in existing terms, one way or another, would be a dangerous exercise in the absence of stricter regulations and procedures," he said.

The Beigian official conceded that the current consensus is far from perfect and that everyone involved, including countries receiving the credits, is unhappy

"But it is better to have a consensus even if it isn't a perfect one than to see nations outbid-ding themselves," he said.

Current Agreement Under the existing agreement the minimum competitive interest rate is 8 per cent for credits over five years to highly developed countries, 7.75 per cent to intermediate countries, and 7.5 per cent to less developed coun-

He was responding to a question about reports that France, after Italy, had agreed to extend for another year to Dec. 31, 1978, its preferential export credit terms to the Soviet Union.

A Garden of Eden for Those With Money

By Michael Getler

VADUZ, Liechtenstein, Jan. 13 (WP).-It is not without reason that this tiny independent principality nestled between Austria and Switzerland has been described as the "financial surden of Eden."

It is probably the ultimate tax haven. It combines the conservatism, political stability, neutrality and strong currency of Switzerland with a unique system of holding company, trust and foundation laws, anonymous ownership, and dedication to secrecy virtually guaranteed to keep even the most persistent foreign tax of ficers away.

Just in case all else fails, Liechtenstein, like neighboring Switzerland, does not consider evasion of another country's taxes a

The result of this is that within Liechtenstein's 81 square miles are shelter-ed more so-called "letter-drop" companies than any other acreage in the world. It is officially estimated that at least 25,000 and perhaps as many as 40,000 such companies-basically just a mailing address and a local "representative"—are registered here. Nobody seems to know for sure the exact number.

Some of what goes on here is legal, including efforts to minimize or avoid cor-porate, income or inheritance tax assessmeets in scores of foreign countries by taking advantage of Liechtenstein's ultraliberal laws and tax rates. Some of what goes on is shady, specifically illegal tax evasion in a variety of creative and purposely complicated forms.

Most of what goes on, however, says one lawyer, is both serious and "good busi-

Liechtenstein official Walter Kranz argues that firms and families legally taking advantage of the local statutes create business revenues that otherwise might not be there. "You can cry about tax havens," he says, "but perhaps they are a necessity." He, along with Swiss bankers and some Western businessmen in Europe, say that if the funds did not go through Liechtenstein, they would go to less stable tax havens such as the Bahamas, Panama. or the Cayman Islands, or to European sites such as certain Swiss can-tons. Andorra or Luxembourg, or they would te attracted by increasingly liberal British laws pertaining to the Channel Islands. None of these, however, is viewed as having the combined safety and experience of Liechtenstein

Two key attractions are the laws on establishing companies and the tax rates. The three unique Liechtenstein business forms are trusts, foundations and holding companies, the latter known as "Anstalts' in German:

The foundations and trusts can be set up so that, with a clever lawyer, they can be put in family or church categories that do not require registration and that allow for payments to be made to beneficiaries. Thus, says a successful lawyer here, "It is excellent for inheritance tax avoldance, or for wealthy German. Dutch, Belgian, French and Italian families, for example, who see socialism threatening their fortunes and want to protect it for their children."

No Information Given Out In this case, the owner is obviously anonymous, but in all cases Liechtenstein law prohibits divulging of any information to third parties beyond that contained in a public register. Except in the rarest cases, that register contains nothing that would disclose the real owners of foundations or holding companies.

The holding companies are the major activity. Commercial foreign interests that do not do business in Liechtenstein but operate elsewhere can set np a holding company here with the single proviso that one member of the board of directors be a Liechtenstein resident and its representative agent here.

These companies are required to place certain details in the public register, but the disclosure rules are designed to cloak the identities of the real owners and the amount of the actual assets beyond the minimum assets required to create such

The registration laws are perhaps the ultimate in Catch-22 phraseology. While a registered Anstalt is supposed to keep proprecords and financial statements, it not required to submit them to any Liechtenstein authorities. It also does not have to submit to any tax declaration, and it is not subject to any audit. It is, as one lawyer says, "completely tax secret." This means that all earnings are tax free, and that any shares issued to beneficiaries can be issued to the bearer, who thus also remains anonymous. The system works closely with the Swiss banks, producing a double lock on identity.

In most cases, the holding companies are set up in one of the banks in neighboring Switzerland, where depositors are assured anonymity from third parties. Then the depositor's agent in the Swiss bank calls up an agent in Liechtenstein and arranges to have a holding company set up for his unnamed client.

The new company is established here and the real owners are then in busines to engage in all kinds of asset transfers and new investments, using the letter-drop address here as a base for tax purposes. On the average, it costs a small holding company about $2,500 in formation costs on this end.

Holding companies whose capital is not divided into stock shares must have a minimnm paid-in capital of about $15,000. In most cases, this is all these companies show on the books and is the amount on which they pay annual taxes plus some res —at a remarkable rate of about 50 cents for each $500. Firms whose capital is divided into shares must pay a tax of 4 per cent only on distributed profits.

Thousands of Deposits

The benefit to Liechtenstein is in the sheer number of companies. The money for minimum capitalization must be on deposit at all times, so the three banks here have thousands of guaranteed, $15,000 minimum deposits to work with. Etockissuing varieties require a $25,000 minimum

The 35,000 to 40,000 holding companies registered here are a representative elite group of some 45 persons, including inolividuals and a few small law firms. Some of these Liechtensteiners represent thousands of companies, drawing as a minimum annual fee about $750 per company.

While this is a tiny sum for large in-vestors, it has obviously made a lot of lawyers here wealthy, and the overall tax collection from these foreign firms ac-counts for almost half of Liechtenstein's annual tax revenues.

West Germany Finds Banker 'Violated' Duty DUESSELDORF, Jan. 16 (AP-DJ).—The North Rhine-West-

phalian state government said today that new investigations have shown that financier Ludwig Poullain "grossy violated his duties" before resigning last month as head of West Germany's third-largest bank.

The Duesseldorf state government therefore regards a financial settlement reached between en and the board of the state-owned Wesideutsche Landesbank-Girozentrale at the time as invalid.

Instead, it will propose his "dismissal without notice," effective from the date of his resignation, an official statement said. State attorneys had discovered that he received about $500,000 as a "consultancy fee" from Franz Josef Schmidt, a financial broker arrested in 1976 for his alleged role in the bankruptcy of the Stuttgart Ratio-Bau construction

Other parts of the agreement bind the Japanese to eventual parlty in trade relations with the world, meaning their markets ulthose in other countries. It said this was to be done by making deeper future tariff cuts than negotiated formulas provide for.

Surprise Expressed

An informed Japanese source sai dthat he was surprised that his government gave as many concessions to the United States as it did. Premier Takeo Fududa's administration has been under heavy pressure to avoid making specific commitments to the United States.

The specific trade measures negotiated into the agreement wer not surprising and do not rpresent any major new concessions by Japan.

The Dines Letter has never lost faith in gold

Since the 1986-88 Top, THE DINES LETTER has warned of a long and hitter international bear market that Mr. Dines has labelled, "The Second Great Depression"—1929 again but in slow motion and invisible because it is concealed by the bloating effects of the lie of inflation. Even now few agree, but if THE DINES LETTER's prediction comes true, it will have been this century's LETTER's prediction comes true, it will have been this century's most spectacular stock market prediction. In 1960, Mr. Dines was the first Wall Street Security Analyst to recommend gold in a publicly-available market letter and so bills himself as "The Original Goldbug." Why? Because THE DINES LETTER predicts an upmove by gold opposite to the DJI—an historic advance in fact. Again, this is atill a minority point of view. For many years, Mr. Dines has predicted competitive currency devaluations, inerradicable high unemployment, "the coming trade wars," and an international stock market crash which sometime in the next few years could drive the DJI down to at least the 400 level. Since 1960, Mr. Dines has never yet flashed the all-out sell signal he is predicting. Because short-term gold prices move by politicans' whims, Mr. Dines is against trading golds, and instead recommends that they be held like land for the long term. Indeed, THE DINES LETTER ventures to guess that primarily the only people still in gold shares today have ridden out all the previous short-term declines. That is because THE DINES LEITER believes gold is declines. That is because THE DINES LETTER believes gold is in a Major Uptrend. Mr. Dines believes the correct path in the last decade has been to sell all glamor stocks and just hold gold. Golds are not yet popular, but THE DINES LETTER lists specific recommendations of gold stocks to buy now, some still with high income.

What about Dome Mines? Had you noticed that Dome has made a new all-time high? The 1975 gold decline was a "shakeout," from weak to strong hands. Conversely, the so-called "1975 Bull Market" was really a gigantic bull trap—as many dismayed investors are learning during this general market decline. Except for the first half of 1975, THE DINES LETTER feels the market has been hasfeally down since 1985. While they wight not be preced ween. basically down since 1968. While they might yet be proved wrong, THE DINES LETTER stands by its prediction that 1975 was not a new bull market, that it was a delusion and a snare, and that there was no "economic recovery" after all.

As you can see, that is not "establishment" advice. THE DINES LETTER gives very specific advice in these trying times and operates on the principle that it will follow the truth anywhere it goes—which can sometimes lead to strange and lonely places. In 1974,

DJI 400?

THE DINES LETTER predicted a DJI rise that would look like a "new bull market" but that it would really be a gigantic "Bull rap" that would end in a "Killer Wave." The financial press except as a "mistake." Mr. Dines now warns that those who do not deduct inflation from all numbers—including the DJI—are being trapped in a web of lies and are almost certainly holding their 1975-78 purchases at a loss. Since late 1966, THE DINES LETTER has been warning that the economy was in an "invisible crash." concealed by inflation. Perhaps the recent heavy layoffs in steel and copper towns are the early tremors, yet this type of information and advice is hard to find. If you haven't been doing well in the stock market and simply want to try something different why not start your search with THE DINES LETTER? Merely reading these ads is no substitute for the real thing, especially for the all-out gold sell signal Mr. Dines promises one of these days, plus the specific advice and information for traders and investors. Flease let go of all preconceptions of THE DINES LETTER and Flease iet go of all preconceptions of THE DINES LETTER and actually try it for yourself. THE DINES LETTER as The Original Goldbug has had for years a special section devoted to in-depth gold reporting called "TDL'S LATEST ON GOLD." We think it's the best gold coverage in the business. And do we actually give precise recommendations as to what you should do now? Perhaps the only advice more specific than that given in THE DINES LETTER is a margin call! We especially recommend the extended 6-month trial to give you a fair look without renewal notices.

Dr. Franz Pick warns that within 2 to 3 years the U.S. will adopt a new dollar worth 10 to 20 old dollars

Dr. Franz Pick is one of the world's most respected experts on moretary offairs and precious metals. He studied law at the University of Leipzig, monetary theory at the University of Hamburg, and inflation-devaluation theory at the Sorbonne in Paris. His degrees include BS, MA, MBA, LLD, and PHD.

Dr. Pick is the Publisher of Pick's World Currency Report and Pick's Currency Yearbook, two publications ooted for their authoritative and candid assessments of global currency events and trends He is the author of 6 books oo silver and gold, and a contributor to Barron's, Playboy, Harper's and the Northern Miner.

Now, in an exclusive interview with the Silver & Gold Report, Dr. Pick discusses his concern for the dollar and why its continued debaseoient will have disastrous effects on the economy. In this interview, he tells you what be expects to happen to the banking system, corporate profits and the major types of investments. He recommends a select few purchases that be believes will weather the financial storms that lie shead. Here are examples of his analyses:

On the dollar "The most serious problem we face today is the debasement of our currency by the government. The dollar has been debased somewhere between 76% and 92% since 1940... The government will continue to debase the dollar until it is worth about a nickel. [Then it] will repudiate its debts oy exchanging 10 to 20 old dollars for each

On government bonds

"I know of no example in history where any government has ever repaid its debts in the purchasing power in which the innocent bought its bonds . Government bonds are certificates of guaranteed confiscation." On the future of the country

"The desting of the currency is the destiny of the oation... By debasing the currency we have endangered the economic existence of the U.S." On the outlook for investors

'[Dollar-denominated assets] will be wiped out... Many people "In the end the only things of value will be gold & silver." - Dr. Franz Pick.

Dr. Franz Pick is NOT all gloom. He is convinced that despite the dollar crisis ahead, you can preserve the value of your money.

And, in an in-depth discussion of silver and gold, he shows you bow.
He examines a wide range of factors in the gold market—including Russia's role and South Africa's race problems. He gives you his estimates for the likely effect of these factors on the price of gold—plus his estimates for the downside risk in buying gold now. He explains the benefits of owning silver and gold now.

And perhaps even more important. Dr. Pick shows you what plains the benefits of owning silver and gold now.

And perhaps even more important. Dr. Pick shows you what types of silver and gold to own. He tells you of a serious danger of owning gold coins—and how to avoid it. He points out the critical mistake investors make in taking out a safe deposit box—and tells you how to avoid that error, too. Dr. Pick gives you candid timing advice. He tells you what country you should store your silver and gold in if you have a small amount, and what country is best for larger amounts.

To my dismay, "Terrorism" is extremely tedious for a lay person to read. The subject is one of the timeliest and most important in current affairs, as is obvious from recent kidnappings, bombings, assassinations, gun battles and airplane hijackings. And few people can claim as much knowledge of the subject as the highly regarded contemporary historian Walter Laqueur.

So I had looked forward with anticipation to reading his latest book. I plodded through every one of its 277 pages, including notes, bibliography, a list of abbreviations and the index. It was a dreadful chore.

If one is familiar beforehand with 19th and early 20th-century Eastern European history, with all its major and minor characters and events, then perhaps it is possible to read appreciatively how the "philosophy of the bomb" developed there. I did appreciate reading how this philosopby was applied in India, be-cause I know quite a lot about India and about the terrorists there whose names Laqueur tosses about with abandon.

But I became annoyingly stalled when faced with sentences like the following: "It should be no-ticed in passing that many, perhaps most leading members of the fighting organization such as Kalyayev, Balmashev, Savinkov and Karpovich had initially belonged to social-democratic, anti-terrorist organizations."

Who? What? Do I really want to know? If those people are important, why couldn't the suthor have introduced them clearly in the text, instead of forcing me to refer to notes in the back of the book or even to an encyclopedia to find out who they

On another occasion, Lequeur suddenly injects the name "Thornton" as one of his sources. Thornton? Who's he? I had to turn to note 31 on page 245 to find out (and to recall, to my surprise, that in another context I once interviewed him). In the sentence after the reference to Thornton, Laqueur cites a statement by "Brian Crozier." Why is Crozier's full name given, but not Thornton's?

In short, my complaint is that Laqueur promises a general audience a primer on terrorism, but couches it in careless scholarly gobbledygook. So the average reader is cheated.

Which is sad. The book really deserves to be popular. In factual content, "Terrorism" is outstanding, but the content is presented strociously. However, all the important elements of the subject are covered authoritatively: the history, the philosophy, the sociology, the dependence on publicity, the potential horror, the difficulty of suppression, the prospects for the future.

Laqueur documents several important points, among them that most terrorists are more effective against democracles than dictatorships, because democracies can't act so sternly to suppress them: that Mark and Engels opposed terrorism and Lenin was ambivalent; that terrorists tend to have educated middle-class origins rather than to be from the proletariat, which they usually profess to defend.

Laqueur says that in the last decade, urban terrorism has largely superseded guerrilla warfare, to which he devoted an earlier book called "Guerrilla." Urban terrorism, he says, involves only a small fraction of the number of people that guerrika warfare did, but its international character and potential access to devastating weaponry pose a substan-tial threat.

Some of the most interesting parts of this book are documen-tary. A table of estimated terrorist budgets from 1880 to 1975; a dictionary of terrorist movements, including the abbreviations by which they are known and their ethnic makeup, and an amazingly thorough bibliography of what others have written on specific aspects of terrorism.

There is a wealth of fine information here. If only Laqueur had used a lucid literary collaborator to eliminate his own aca-

E. Germany Announces Plans for Rock Opera

BERLIN, Jan. 13 (Reuters)___ An East German theater has announced plans for the country's frist rock opera, based on a story about a youngster with a flying motorbike and his search for identity in an adult world.

The opera, entitled "Pink Leaves," is scheduled to open next year in the Baltic port of Rostock, with lyrics by 40-yearold Waltraud Lewen, who has translated 16 Handel operas from Italian into German.

According to the ADN news agency, the music has been written by Horst Krueger, well known here as a pop composer.

You come to Argenting for the month and we work very hard and then we see.' It worked very well and I asked bem if he would coach me all the time, steady, and he said OK." There are those who see the connection as a kind of deal between Dr. Faustus and Mephi-stopheles, Vilas selling his poetic soul for fulfillment of his yearning to be No. L

Certainly the quick and muscular lefthander has become more self-centered in the last year. He resigned from the Association of Tennis Professionals, at Tiriac's urging, and has played in lucrative round-robin tournaments and exhibitions that his brothers in the players guild see as detrimental to the tournament game. Some have accused him of taking "appearance money" at tournaments contrary to Grand Prix rules, even though he can away with the $300,000 bonus prize for topping the Grand Priz point standings, but these charges have not been substantiated.

Short-Term Motives

He is less cooperative with the press and tournament promoters now, and many say that Tiriac has taught him to shirk blatantly responsibilities to his profession for selfish shortterm motives. But if success on the court is the gauge, Tiriec deserves to be named coach of the year. After finishing as runner-up to Roscoe Tanner in the Australian Open, Vilas won his first Grand. Slam title the French in June, removing a tremendous element of self-doubt from his psyche. His 50-match July-through-October winning streak was the most impressive of the 10-year

Viles says that the technical changes Tiriao has made are subtle substantial at this level. but more in fine-tuning strokes he already had than making any fundamental changes. He has given him more shot-making flexibility, however, witness the slice forehand Vilas used to such advantage in beating Connors in the Forest Hills final in lieu of his usual top spin. He beat Connors again to the Mas-modern era of are tennis.

Tiriac has worked him very hard, made him into the fittest player on the circuit, and im-parted a new aggressiveness.

That, according to Vilas, is as much a state of mind as of volley. "It took him a long time to convince me about the tactics," he says, "because it is no good to attack if you are not convinced . . . But he is a great tactician, a guy who makes the tactics perfect."

Super Bowl: An American Cultural Phenomenon

By Tony Kornheiser

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (NYT).—"If Jesus were alive today, he would be at the Super Bowl"

-Norman Vincent Peale Is it that big?

"Football is the sport of the historical moment," says Harry Edwards, professor of sociology at the University of Califormis "It's the most violent collision sport that really involves strategy, speed and aggressiveness. The Super Bowl is its ultimate conclusion. They hard-sell you on it from July to January, and it's like plugging into the red, white and It's a corporate blueprint for American society. Coming when it does, at the beginning of the new year, it's the ultimate religious spectacle.

Lamer Hunt, who owns more pieces of the American pie than most people (ketchup, oil wells, a tennis tour and the Kansas City Chiefs), named the Super Bowl and awarded it its Roman numer listens to those words and chuckles. Hunt believes that sports are way out of proportion in American cultural life.

You know what I've heard?" he says. "I've heard that 800 million Chine couldn't care less who wins the Super

These things are not mutually ex-To paraphrase Randy Newman, who in "Redneck" sings about Lester Maddox, the Super Bowl may be a fool's toy, but It is our fool's toy.

It is an American cultural phenomenon. How is it measured? The way most people measure most things: in numbers and dollars,

In Prime Time Next Sunday's Super Bowl will be elevised by CBS, beginning at 6 p.m. (EST), the first time the game will be seen in prime time. More people watch television in January than in any other month, and more people watch television on Sunday night than at any other time. So CBS, in its most optimistic projection. says that 85 million Americans will watch this Super Bowl. Only one news event has been seen by more Americans-Apollo M, the moon shot. Only one entermore Americans—the final episode of "Roots," televised last January, on a

Sunday night. "The Super Bowl is a perfect combination of news and entertainment," says Jim Kensil, now president of the New York Jets, a man wino sat in on the first planning session of the Super Bowl in 1966. "You see, it really doesn't matter how 'Little House on the Prairie' turns out; in the Super Bowl, it matters."

To purchase one minute of television advertising time for this Super Bowl costs $325,000 the highest such cost in history. There are probably 500,000 people who watch this game who do not watch any other television program all year." says Bob Wussler, president of CBS Sports.

Cultural Imperative

An examination of the success of the Super Bowl must take two things into account: the compelling attractiven football, and the cultural imperative for watching this particular game. Americans caress the Super Bowl as much as they caress any event in contemporary culture. In many ways, it is the Mr. America pageant.

Clearly, football is the national sport now. "It's a modern sport; it's aggressive, more dynamic than basebell," says Ephraim Yuchtman-Yaar, a visiting Israeli professor of sociology at Columbia University who studies sport and society. Aggression is the key. People oow tend to be passive; they want the product delivered to them obviously, and football delivers it all. It is highly visible and doesn't require too much imagination. It provides a legitimate opportunity for men and women to express their aggres-

It has individual appeal. "It represents our values—hard work, dedication and brutality," says Dr. Thomas Tutko, sports psychologist at San Jose State University. "It says who we are as a nation. It actually enshrines our values."

It has corporate appeal. "Football is itself the biggest dramatization of American business ever invented," says Marshal McLuhan, the sociologist, "You have your scoreboards, your individual and team statistics, your steady gains and your emergency board meetings in your huddle, eh? The nature of the aggressions and calculations is pure busi-

Football has seeped into virtually every element of society's fabric, from the executive (Nixon's 'game plan') to the social ("make a pass at him her"). And, with the advent of "Mooday Night Football." removing the game from the parochial "Sunday only" level, the central family unit became sensitized. Hollywood, which doesn't like to take chances, has now produced three big-budget films
—"Two-Minute Warning," "Black Sunday" and "Semi-Tough"—that feature the Super Bowl.

And there are additional, perhaps more basic reasons why the Super Bowl is so galvanizing a national event:

• It is the annual conclusion of the most widely watched, highly structured sport in the country. It must produce a winner—the rules do not permit equality; conceivably, the teams play ad infinitum to avoid a tie. "We're the kind of people," says Tutko, "who like things decided on one roll of the

• It is presented live. "Other than a hostage altuation," saya Robert Lipsyte, a former sports columnist, "there isn't much live drama anymore.

• It is a single game. "There's a better chance for the underdog," says Yuchtman-Yaar. "It doesn't stretch out like the World Series. It's easier to concentrate attention, technically and spychologically, on a one-shot."

Though the game may be the centerpiece of Super Sunday, the table on which the centerpiece rests becomes progressively larger. Even Pete Rozelle, the National Football League commissioner, says, albeit reluctantly, that the Super Bowl "is probably more of an event than simply a game."

The event has mythic overtones. The name and the use of Roman numerals for annual identification—both given by Hunt-are master strokes of symbolism. Hunt borrowed the oumerals from some California sportswriters, who used them for historical reference in discussing past games; the NFL adopted their use io

He came up with the name quite by accident. His daughter, Sharon, played with a high-compression rubber "super tall" around the house and at a plan-ning meeting in 1966. Huot called the controntation between the American and National Football Leagues "the super game-you know, the Super Bowl." Everyone present laughed. But by 1969 the name was copyrighted and printed on the tickets.

Tlasbes of Brilliance

"In retrospect," says Don Weiss, director of public relations for the NFL. "these were flashes of brilliance." Crutial too, perhaps, were the timing of the first few games and the herole figures involved in them. The first Super Bowl was in 1967. "We were losing in Vletnam, and we didn't understand why," says Tutko. the psychologist at San Jose State. "We needed a battlefield we could win on." Football has always been the sport most closely resembling war. Was it merely coincidence that the early Super Bowls presented halftime shows that glorifled patriotism and the American fighting heritage? Vince Lombardi, coach of the Green Bay Packers, had a quasi-military approach to the game, and maybe his triumphs in the first two Super Bowls gave the country hope. In any case, as opposition to the war became fashionable, Joe Namath, the anti-establishment hero within the establishment, led his Jets to the 1989 victory. As the nation's sympathies shifted, it seemed, so did the Super Bowl's: Namath's victory psychologically insured the transcendence of the Super

On Sunday, Pete Rozelle will awaken in New Orleans, will walk to the window and, whatever weather conditions show themselves, will say, "Ah, the day dawns bright and clear for the Super Bowl" Then he will allow himself a slight giggle. Rozelle knows that he has created a King Kong. His state of the Super Bowl address is simple, he says. Take all the esoteric reasons and file them some-

"What we supply," he says, "is entertainment. If we spent all our time wor-rying about domestic and political problems, we'd be a damn sick nation. We seek forms of cscape. The NFL is escape and entertainment, and we're damn happy it's a big form of escapism.

The coach, Tom Landry, puts football in third place behind family and God; the quarterback, Roger Staubach is the all-American hero and the team has been consistently suc-cessful, with 11 playoff appearances in the last 12 years, including four Super Bowl games and one world championship, in

The Broncos have come down from the mile-bigh city to sea level but their spirits are still soaring from a story-book season under their peppery first-year coach Red Miller. They advanced to the playoffs for the first time in the 18 years of the franchise.

Landry has been calling the game a toss-up all week Miller says his team has no intention of losing. The odds-makers rate the Cowboys a 5-point favorite to end the American Football Conference's streak of five straight Super Bowl champions.

The Cowboys are talented to their spurs. They led the National Football League in offense, defense and quarterback sacks. Staubach won the NFL passing title, running back Tony Dorsett became only the eighth rookie to gain more than 1,000 vards and wide receiver Drew Pearson averaged 18 yards for each of his 48 catches. The Cowboys' doomsday II defense is considered the strongest unit in the team's history, and why not? Opponents were allowed only 229.5 yards per game, and in the playoffs two of the game's premier running backs— Walter Payton of Chicago and Minnesota's Chuck Foreman were shut down-

The Cowboys use a variety of formations on offense, with men in motion and the highly sucful shotgun in obvious passing situations. Defensively, they

Grand Prix Racers Starting the Yearlong Drive

By Michael Katz

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (NYT) .-Ladies and gentlemen, start your engines. There is enough fuel for another season of auto racing. U.S. racing officials still check

OPEC policies as closely as they tabulate sponsorship receipts, but all are optimistic that the sport's biggest worry, a recurrence of the 1973-74 fuel crisis, will not occur this year. And why not be optimistic?

Even the Arabs are investing in the sport of corporations, a sport in which "How fast do you want to go?" means "How much do you want to spend?"

When 1978 takes the green flag Sunday with the start of the Grand Prix of Argentina, one of the cars on the starting grid is expected to be entered by a Briton, Frank Williams, driven by an Australian, Alan Jones, and fueled by Saudi money.

Prime Ingredient

That figures. In this sport, one of the biggest U.S. underwriters is known as "The Bank" (Citicorp), and money, not oil, is the prime ingredient.

International grand prix racing furnishes an example. "Tracks don't get much change from a million-dollar bill to put on a grand prix," says Tom Duval, executive director of the Sports Car Club of America, which sanctions the two Formula One events held in the United States. To run even a one-driver team for the 15-country series probably would cost $800,000 to $900,000-and this sum would offer little chance of winning,

Plotnick wouldn't tell me how he got the names of the people who wereo't watching TV, but he hinted he has a very close connection with the CIA, which knows exactly what every American is doing. He had a list of oames and addresses and said I could come along and ece for myself how he operales.

The first house we came to belooged to a family named Peters. Plotnick was very polite.

"Pardon me, ma'am, but I understand your TV set is off. 1 was wondering if you could tell

"Who on earth told you that?" she wanted to know. "The children have it on right now. Come m and I'll show you."

We went inside and found four thildren in the living room. The set was on, but instead of a picture on the screen the kids were playing bockey with four diale. "But they're not watching any-

"But that wasn't what television was invented for," Plotnick said. "It was invented to transmit pictures and sell products to the American public."

"I know," said the mother. "But the kids saw the game advertised on television and insisted we buy it. Frankly it's a lot more fun than Kojak and it's been a lifecaver in our family."

Once we were out in the street Plotnick wrote some notes on a plece of paper. "This is going on all over America. The damn kids are using TV to play games They don't realize there are millions of dollars of commercials at stake. They would rather play pinball on a TV screen."

The next house we went to pelonged to the Strathmores. Mrs. Strathmore admitted they didn't wate': television anymore because their set wae broken.

"I did, and the next Monday he threw another beer bottle at Howard. How many TV screens do you want me to buy?"

Plotnick was disgusted. It was about 10:30 at night. We had visited houses where the oeighbore said the inhabitants had either gone to see "Star Wars" or "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," homes where one or the other person was in the process of getting a divorce and couldo't watch TV because they were spending all their time on the telephone and several where people admitted they had gone back to reading books.

"Each household we've visited," taid Plotnick, "represents one miliion people."

Our final call was at the home of the Pelis (not their real name). It took some time for Mr. Pell to answer the door. He was in his bathrobe. Plotnick asked him why he wasn't watching TV.

Turkmen Women Weave Tradition, Ideology

By Charles Bremner

A SHKHABAD, Soviet Turkmenia (Reuters).—For 40 hours B week, Oguljahnan Aramovi, a young Turkmenian weaver. sits in national dress at her loom and painstakingly threads a carpet which could have come from the Middle Ages.

Nearby a chart displays the work record of Miss Aramovi and her 500 or so fellow workers and a red banner proclaims in Turkmenian and Russian: "We Will Implement the Decisions of the 25th Party Congress."

in the Ashkhabad Order of Lenin Experimental Carpet Factory, one of 10 such enterprises in this South-Central Asian republic, the visitor finds an incongruous mixture of the Soviet state and age-old tradition.

Miss Aramovi, 22, who has worked on the loom eince she was 18, and the other weavers—all women—produce Turkmen carpets, sometimes known as Bukhara rugs, which vie with the Persian variety as the most beautiful Oriental carpets.

Working two or three to a loom in a long drab workshop, the weavers take from weeks to months to complete each carpet with its octagonal geometric ornaments repeated in mirror-like patterns against a dark red background. Each carpet embodies one of 30 designs representing Turk-en tribes euch as Tekkes or the Yomuts and contains from 350,000 to over a million separate knots per square meter. In a year, a highly skilled weaver can produce only 10 to 12 square meters. A machine can manufacture the same area in a matter of hours but, as officials of the state monopoly point out, no machine comes near to matching the fine workmanship and rich texture of the handmade version. The only technical concession to the 20th century is the vertical loom, which replaced the horizontal version once used on the floor.

"Carpets are in the blood of tha Turkmen people," a local worker said. "Nearly every family has its own loom." A local saying goes: "Spread ont your carpet and I will read

'Socialized' in 1926

Carpet-making, a cottage industry since the late Middle Ages, was "socialized" in 1926 soon after Turkmenia, which shares borders with Iran and Afghanistan, was incorporated in the new Collectives were set up which provided materials and marketed the carpets, paying the weaver a fixed salary. Communism also brought with it an ideological explanation for the carpets, which had for centuries adorned the tents, mud brick houses and palaces of the Turkmen tribes. "Soviet master carpet-makers who have organized into work-shops are searching for a means of expressing a new world view using antique traditions and methods," an official Soviet reference work states.

As a folk art, carpet-making was encouraged under Communism although the Soviet state took all possible steps to rid the Turkmen people of "feudal" practices of their old culture rein-forced by Islamic law.

Turkmen women took to weaving partraits of Lenin to show their gratitude to the Soviet leader, a guidebook says. Now most of Turkmenia's 5,000 professional weavers work in collectives although a number operate at home, selling their carpets at town bazaars. The Ashkhabad factory produces 4,700 square meters a year.

"Most weavers would rather work at the fixed salary with Oguljahnan Aramovi. 22, sits before hand loom 40 hours a week making traditional Bukhara carpets.

Oguljahnan earns about 140 rubles ($180) a month, with a 50-per-cent bonus for fulfilling her plan-not always easy to do,"

The 7-square-meter carpet she and her partner will produce over about two or three months will be sold by the state for about 900 rubles ($1,200), probably to the United States or West-

Some 80 per cent of Turkmenia's carpets are exported for hard currency. Sitting at her loom, which is covered with pinups of film stars and ice skaters, Miss Aramovi takes 20 minutes to complete a line of knots, each one tied with a series of intricate, almost invisible movements.

"I feel a slight wrench when the carpet I've been working on is sold but I like to think that my carpets are going all over the world," she said.

Like all Soviet enterprises, the collective looks after the worker's spiritual and political interests. Near the main workshop a "moral code" sets out the qualities of the ideal citizen and carpet-maker.

The factory's design chief, Aziz Bagirov, 67, claims Turkmenian carpets are more durable than Persian carpets. He said the latter were made partly of wool, partly of cotton, whereas Turkmenian carpets were made of pure wool. There was another difference, Mr. Bagirov said, pointing toward the Iranian border 40 kilometers away. "Over there, it's

PEOPLE: What It Means to Be The Last Name in the Book

What's in a name? If it happens to be Hero Zzyzzk, son of Xerxes Zayaxx, it means a lot of telephone calls. His name is the last in the Madison, Wis., telephone book and for people who amuse themselves by reading telephone books, Hero Zzyzzi is a hard name to ignore. He gets calls at all hours-from drunks, kids, insomnlacs and jokers. But once in a while he gets one from "an interested young lady," and that's why he doesn't have his number unlisted. Zzyzzz (prounounced ziz-icks) he swears, is his real name, the result of a Finnish, Lithuanian Russian, French, German and Central European family background.
